Weekday Poems

By Hanna Fiegenbaum

Shift

Too hard

To go downstairs

No coffee no milk no sweets

For the visitor

I had been eating from the cake of boredom

I wasn't hungry anymore

Why not leave things like that

Enter: the visitor

Ah

You're wearing the sun today

I woke up

It came through the window

To shake my hand

Doing Nothing

Blank

The evening hand

Fiddled with the pearls

Of non-interchangeable events

Two women beneath the glass roof

No sun pierces through the window

Their laughter falls

Like autumn leaves

A bleeding nose

From spicy chicken

Only when I left

Did the rooster start to turn again

Traffic lights control

The gliding of words

Into the flash of the processing camera

While waiting

Cars cross my brain

I meet

Some blue eyes

Among all eyes

Nibbling on my shirt

Lambs wool piece

If I would have ever got to walk outside that day
Rain would have hung heavy on me

A short glance at the sign
Told my body was made out of lambs wool
Very unusual, I know
But I was soft like that

I sat down
Two big knots figured as my lips
And I stretched my legs

He went on asking
What is it?
Did you eat something healthy?

It was a sweet suggestion
I had always assumed
Restart
As soon as I would change my eating behaviour

But no
I didn't know it myself

It was lambs wool in that IKEA plastic box
It was something else

My eyes are dry

A journey

To the soft-boiled bottom of the punch

Where my treats show up

Have a drink have two more

I can read the situation

Have another one

I start thinking worse

About Everyone is here tonight

Run some water

Straight through my nerves

When lifting myself from phone

Relax my eyes

Relax your eyes

Night goose

In a nightgown

A purchased pair of flabby wings
